Privacy Policy

This Policy will apply to the activities and operations of People International Australia Inc. (PIA).

PIA is committed to responsible and respectful use and protection of personal information in accordance with the Privacy Act 1988 (Commonwealth).

‘Personal information’ is information or an opinion about an identified individual or an individual who is reasonably identifiable.

By visiting the PIA website, using any PIA services, or otherwise providing PIA with your personal information (or authorising it to be provided by someone else), you agree to your personal information being handled as set out in this Privacy Policy.

POLICY – PERSONAL INFORMATION

Any personal information an individual or organisation chooses to provide to PIA is only used for the purposes outlined in this policy.

What personal information does PIA collect and hold?

PIA only collects personal information that is necessary for the provision of our services.

Personal information that may be held by PIA includes:

- Contact information (such as name or pseudonym, phone number(s), mailing address and email address);

- Payment information (as needed to securely process payments, issue receipts, and provide payment history if required);
- Personal preferences (such as communication preferences or areas of special interest);
- Other information such as date of birth, previous names, qualifications, and tax file number as required to comply with law.

You do not have to provide PIA with your personal information, and you may deal with PIA anonymously or using a pseudonym if you wish. However, if you do not provide PIA with the personal information required, it may not be able to provide you with services or assistance.

Sensitive Information

Some personal information that PIA collects may also be sensitive information.

The most common form of sensitive information PIA collects is in relation to religious beliefs. For example, PIA may seek information about your religious beliefs (including assenting to a statement of faith), the church you attend, and your broader involvement in ministry activities, for the purpose of determining your suitability for appointment as a board or committee member, volunteer, or service provider, or involvement in an activity.

Health information may also be collected for event participants, if required for the planning of appropriate catering or activities.

Unsolicited personal information

If you provide PIA with personal information that has not been requested (unsolicited personal information) it will generally, unless otherwise required or permitted by law or have your agreement to keep it, be deleted or destroyed as soon as possible after receiving it.

How does PIA collect and hold personal information?

PIA may collect your personal information in various ways, including by telephone, website, email (or other electronic means), in writing and/or through online forms/surveys whether hosted on an PIA or third party website. The information collected may be held in an electronic or non-electronic format.

In most situations PIA will collect your personal information directly from you. However, PIA may also collect information from third parties if it is impractical to collect it directly from you. For example, information may be collected from an organisation or individual that is registering you for an PIA activity, if you have authorised them to do this on your behalf.

Why does PIA collect, hold and use your personal information?

PIA only collects, holds and uses personal information for the purposes for which it is provided, related purposes that are considered to be within your reasonable expectations, or as permitted or required by law.

Such purposes may include:

- contacting you regarding matters that you may have an interest in;
- convening meetings;
- processing authorised payments to and from you;
- providing you with information or services that have been requested;
- complying with legislation such as, but not limited to, Australian Charities and Not-for-Profits Commission Act 2012 and Income Tax Assessment Act 1997 / Tax Administration Act 1953; and
- any other uses identified at the time of collecting your personal information.

How Information is protected

PIA will take reasonable steps to protect the personal information it holds from misuse and loss and from unauthorised access, modification or disclosure.

For example, the following security measures are implemented:

- security procedures for access to our internal office areas;
- security procedures within our offices (including locked cabinets for personal information that is particularly sensitive);
- management of access privileges, to ensure that only those who really need to do so can view your personal information;

- IT security procedures including password protection and virus scanning tools; and
- staff members and volunteers required to treat all personal information as confidential (as outlined in privacy procedures and employment contracts).

Who does PIA disclose personal information to?

PIA will never disclose your personal information to another entity for the purposes of that entity soliciting charitable donations from you.

PIA may disclose your information to government bodies, regulators, law enforcement agencies and other parties where authorised or required by law.

PIA may disclose your personal information to third party service providers, agents or contractors from time to time to assist in the provision of services, but will generally require those parties to protect your personal information in the same way PIA does.

PIA may disclose your information to any other entities identified at the time of collecting your personal information or which you subsequently request or expressly consent to us providing with your personal information.

Will PIA disclose personal information to overseas recipients?

In general, PIA does not disclose your personal information to any overseas recipients, although there may be some specific exceptions to this, such as organising for a delegation to attend a conference or other event or when necessary to facilitate your agreed participation in a PIA or related overseas mission activity.

On such occasions PIA will seek your consent to disclose your personal information.

Should you submit personal information for publication on the PIA website, you are consenting for it to be published on the internet, and it may be available around the world.

Website use of Cookies

PIA websites may make use of both session cookies and persistent cookies. Session cookies are short-lived, are only used during a browsing session, and expire when you quit your browser. A session cookie is used during normal navigation of websites and when you access dynamic content such as forms and restricted content. The session cookie may only identify you if you have been granted log-in access to the site and you are logged in. Persistent cookies are stored on your computer, contain an expiration date, and may be used to track your browsing behavior. This cookie does not identify you.

How can I access, correct and/or update personal information?

You may access personal information PIA holds about you, subject to any legal restrictions or exemptions. You may do this by contacting the Privacy Officer, using the contact details below.

While PIA will not charge you for a request for accessing your personal information, you should be aware that PIA may charge a reasonable fee (which will be notified to you once you make a request) for our time and expenses in the following circumstances:

- if an extended amount of time is required to collate and prepare material for you; and
- if you wish to have files photocopied for you.

PIA will take reasonable steps to ensure that the personal information it holds about you is accurate, complete and up-to-date. However, PIA also relies on you to advise us of any changes to your personal information in a timely manner.

If there are any changes required to your personal information, or if you believe the personal information PIA holds about you is not accurate, complete or up-to-date, please contact the PIA staff member or volunteer responsible for the provision of services to you so that records can be amended accordingly. If you are unsure who that person is, contact our Privacy Officer using the contact details below.

Complaints

You may also contact the Privacy Officer if you have any concerns or complaints about how your personal information has been handled by PIA, including breaches of this policy. The Privacy Officer will investigate the concern or complaint and provide a written response to you as quickly as reasonably possible. If you are not satisfied with this response you may appeal to the Chairman of the PIA Board for the matter to be reviewed.
